

We are very pleased to announce that The Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons has rated our Emergency Out of Hours Service Vets Now as “Outstanding” in the delivery of small animal emergency and critical care.

The accreditations are awarded as part of the RCVS practice standards scheme, which was set up to recognise excellence in veterinary care.

Clinics gaining the emergency and critical care award must demonstrate that they excel in caring for animals 24 hours a day. They must also provide evidence that their staff have been trained in emergency care, nursing, and recognising pain. In addition, clinics must have access to resources and equipment for emergency diagnostics and treatment, and provide a range of pain relief. Inspectors carry out rigorous on-site assessments before coming to their decision. Outstanding is the highest grade a clinic can achieve.

This award gives pet owners using our service the peace of mind that Vets Now’s teams are among an elite in the clinical and client care they provide, and that Vets Now continually strive to be at the forefront of the profession.

Vets Now Lincoln is open through the night, seven-days-a-week, and day and night and on weekends and bank holidays, to treat any pet emergencies that may occur.
