

HEARING CLINIC

Our hearing clinic is here to test specific dog and cat breeds as part of a screening programmes for congenital deafness and for pets where hearing loss is suspected through the use of the BAER test.

BAER Testing

Using the BAER (Brainstem Auditory Evoked Response) test is very useful for:

- Assessing the risk of congenital deafness
- Evaluating conduction through the brainstem and auditory nerve pathways
- Providing information about patients with lesions affecting the auditory nervous system
- Monitoring a patient's status in the intensive care unit

This test is recommended for:

- Dalmatians
- English Setters
- English Cocker Spaniels
- Australian Cattle Dogs
- Jack Russell Terriers

Puppies can be tested as early as 5–6 weeks old.

Many dog breeders test litters to reduce the incidence of deafness.

Prices

£150 For BAER

£50 For sedation if needed
